LIVED POETRY

(Written For The Argus.)
Before him Beauty's splendid vision shone.
The earth for him reechoed melody;
And all creation was divinely
fair Because his heart was tuned to harmony.
That Beauty to his fellows would
he show,
And with its music build their lives complete;
He longed to write for them im-
mortal songs,
Expressing his own joy in lyrics
sweet.

He passed along life's ways unselfishly,
Performed each lowly task with
faithfulness,
The while his soul with epic rapture burned,
Though skill he lacked its glory
to express.

His neighbors knew how beautiful and sweet
His life had been, when he with time was done.
Then they to one another said, "His life
A poem was." Thus he the laurel won.
